Emeco

American Manufacturer

The Emeco US Navy chair was originally commissioned by the US Navy for use on warships in WWII. The design specifications were simple - design a sturdy and robust chair that would withstand all conditions. Who would have thought this chair would become such an icon of American design?

The design proved so popular that the original manufacturer, Emeco, released a second version of the iconic chair in 1961. The latter design has more rounded back and sides.

Legend at the Emeco factory would have it that the seat of the US Navy chair was shaped upon Betty Gable's bottom.
