20th Century Modern Classics

George Nelson

American Designer

George Nelson, an American designer, was an early environmentalist. His ultimate goal as a designer was "to do much more with much less."

The classic Coconut Chair was originally designed by George Nelson in 1955 to resemble a coconut cut into eight slices.

Nelson worked closely with the US manufacturer Herman Miller as the Director of Design for over 25 years. During this time he collaborated with the Eames and many other designers on stand out pieces of the era.
