Harry Bertoia

American / Italian Designer

Harry Bertoia was born in Italy but migrated to the US at the age of 15. He studied sculpture and painting in Detroit. He became involved in furniture design in the 1940's perceiving the chair as a sculpture.

In Bertoia's own words, "If you look at these chairs, they are mainly made of air, like sculpture. Space passes right through them."

Bertoia was a member of the faculty of the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan when Charles Eames was head of the Department of Experimental Design. The wire chairs of Bertoia appeared a year after the wire chair of Charles Eames.
